Pride and Prejudice by Jane Austen is a romance novel that takes place in Hertfordshire and Derbyshire, which are located in England. It is about the Bennet family, who have five daughters: Jane, Elizabeth, Mary, Kitty, and Lydia. Jane is very friendly, Elizabeth is intelligent and stands up for what's right and wrong, Mary is serious and likes to play the piano, Kitty and Lydia both love to seek attention and are not mature. Mrs. Bennet wants her daughters to get married to rich men, especially her oldest daughters, Jane and Elizabeth. Mrs. Bennet hears about a man who is coming to town, who is Mr. Bingley. Mrs. Bennet wants her daughters to meet him and dance with him. Mr. Bingley and Jane both like each other. Another man who came with Mr. Bingley is Mr. Darcy, whom at first people liked but he was arrogant and rude. Throughout the novel, the Bennets did not like him because of how he acted. Elizabeth and Mr. Darcy doesn't always agree on everything. Both found each other to be unlikeable.

I thought this novel was really good. I loved most of the characters and found this novel to be entertaining. I liked Mr. Bennet because he was funny, but I didn't like Mrs. Bennet because she was dramatic throughout the whole novel. She kept pressuring her daughters to get married, which I found to be annoying. She did want the best for her daughters. This novel was sometimes hard to understand because of how different English was back then, but it was mostly understandable.

I would recommend this novel because the plot is good, the characters are good, and it is a well written novel. I think people who like romance novels would like this. From the books I have read so far, this one does not remind me of any other books.
